

HUSCH BLACKWELL

Export Controls & Economic Sanctions

Husch Blackwell has broad experience counseling clients in connection with exports, economic sanctions and international trade law. Our team has worked with manufacturers, distributors, retailers, technology companies, service providers and foreign suppliers of all sizes to ensure that their goods and services get to where they need them to go as efficiently as possible.

As U.S. trade policy continues to chart an unpredictable course with larger and more frequent enforcement actions, our team's ability to address client challenges in a comprehensive way delivers real-world, bottom-line value. Our services in connection with export controls and economic sanctions include:

Export Administration Regulations (EAR)

International Traffic in Arms Regulations (ITAR)

Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives

Foreign Corrupt Practices Act (FCPA) compliance and representation

Antiboycott compliance

Trade sanctions and embargoes administered by the Office of Foreign Assets Control (OFAC)

Husch Blackwell's International Trade Insights provides readers with original insight on the latest changes in trade and supply chain law, regulation and best practices; as well as address compliance concerns, international agreements and other related topics.

OFAC Enforcement Actions by Volume and Value

Work Highlights

- Representing a global technology company on ITAR, trade controls and sanctions-related matters associated with global IT services contracts, allowing the client's business teams to analyze and mitigate potential risk.
- Providing day-to-day global ethics and trade compliance counsel, representation and training related to export controls, sanctions, anti-bribery, FCPA and customs related issues to a leading global supplier of water treatment and process chemicals.
- Representing the chemical unit of a large private company and its eight operating businesses with day-to-day compliance and transactional advice on export controls and sanctions-related matters, including classification, country of origin marking, proper terms of sale, and foreign national employee and visitor vetting.
- Representing a multinational distributor of consumer products providing client with US sanctions advice in order to ensure that its Iran-based operations are compliant with applicable U.S. sanctions and that its U.S. personnel and operations are properly ringfenced from its Iran operations.
- Represent the world's leading developer and distributor of sports analytics software with day-to-day U.S. sanctions and export controls compliance support, including product classifications, counterparty denied persons list screening, and sanctions diligence in its worldwide mergers and acquisitions transactions.
- Represent a Germany-based multinational logistics company on all issues relating to U.S. export controls and sanctions matters, including the re-imposition of U.S. sanctions against Iran and entity list restrictions.
- Represent the world's second-largest supplier of irrigation equipment with significant ongoing transactions in developing frontier markets that present heightened sanctions risks.

Business in no longer usual. Neither are our solutions.

At Husch Blackwell, we have built our law firm around one idea: to guide our clients from where they are to where they want to be. Our industry-centric approach gives us a deep understanding of what our clients face every day. But more than that, it creates a shared vision that moves our clients forward.
